Cymbidium Orchids

This lovely Out Door Orchid is successfully grown under lath or tree shade or any other medium that gives approximately 50-50 filtered sun light.

Cymbidium do well planted in beds or grown in pots — plant high so the base of the pseudo bulbs are at surface level, keep a mulch of leafmold on the beds when planted out —

Cymbidium must have good drainage, we use a potting soil of one third each, leafmold, top soil and decomposed granite. Do not over water, Cymbidium do not like their feet wet, Keep them reasonably moist during the growing season, thereafter reduce the amount of water in order to encourage bloom. Spray the foliage lightly during hot weather. Cymbidium are not particularly sensitive to cold, we find our plants withstanding a temperature of 28 degrees, additional protection should be given if temperature drops below this — Like most of the Out Door Orchids, Cymbidium are comparatively free from pests.

Laelia - Odontoglossum - Oncidium and Stanhopea

These easy-grown Epiphytal Orchids can be grown under lath or tree shade where the temperature does not drop to freezing.

We grow them in Oregon Moss, Spagnum Moss, Osmunda or Redwood fiber. Do not keep the moss or fiber wet, allow it to dry out, then re-water — these plants need no soil or food.

When planting in pots or hanging baskets use plenty of drainage (broken pots etc.) at least one third the capacity of the container should be filled with this drainage. We like these plants mounted on a wood slab or branch of a tree as it is almost impossible to then overwater and they are very effective in the lath house or patio.

Epidendrum and Cyrtopodium

These plants should have the same potting soil as Cymbidium — and the care given these plants is the same — However they will not stand as much cold as Cymbidium and we advise giving inside protection if the temperature drops to freezing.

They can be taken in the house for a few days when it is too cold and windy and then be put outside.

Most of our Epidendrums make fine house plants as they are in bloom most of the year.

CYMBIDIUM ORCHIDS - SPRING 1948

For the amateur as well as the professional, there is no finer flower and none so easy to grow as the Cymbidium. We have grown these Orchids over a period of years under the following conditions: In Southern California we grow Cymbidiums out of doors under lath or tree shade, however some of our friends grow them under glass, either one just so long as they have a good circulation of air but no direct wind. Cymbidium do well planted in raised beds or grown in pots. Plant high so the base of the pseudo bulbs are at surface level, mulch with leaf mold to keep the compost on the acid side. Cymbidium must have good drainage. We use a potting soil of 2 parts leaf mold, 1 part top soil and 1 part pea gravel or decomposed granite. Use plenty of broken pots or coarse gravel in the bottom of the pot. Keep them reasonably moist during the growing season, thereafter reduce the amount of water in order to encourage bloom. Spray foliage lightly during hot weather. Cymbidiums are not particularly sensitive to cold. We find our plants withstanding a temperature of 28°. Additional protection is suggested if temperature falls below this. Like most Out Door Orchids, Cymbidium is comparatively free from pests. Never water Cymbidium after 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Although we grow our plants out of doors, Cymbidium make a fine house plant, and are grown successfully throughout the east as such.

We endeavor to keep the following in stock at all times, as we consider these plants essential in every collection. They are all free bloomers and strong growers:-
